The information I gave you comes directly from a Simplex 2350 Master Clock factory works technician manual...if the steps don't work, you have a modified unit and your only option is to contact a Simplex dealer for an outcall repair order. You may have an older model, or one custom fitted for a specific purpose...but every one I have seen in the past seven years were all programmable for security codes and all have the forward/back button....and all but perhaps a couple were 12-24 compatible.

In 2010, their Simplex 2350 broke, so they got an American Time and Signal AllSync master clock system to replace it (the same model that K-8 school now has). This new one just rings all the bells and chimes at once. Additionally, it began to break down this spring, but it has since been fixed. My high school had a Simplex 6400 master time system.
